

SPRING 2009
Science, Technology, and
Public Affairs

PAF547/BIO515/HON494/SOS516

Taught By:
Michael Crow, Dan Sarewitz, and Ryan Meyer

Wednesdays, 7:40-10:30AM
Fulton Center Room 4440

This class will explore the political, economic, cultural, and moral foundations of science and technology governance in democratic society. Science and technology are the most powerful transforming forces in the world today. We will investigate, from a variety of perspectives, the ways in which this transforming force is influenced by decisions that humans make about priorities, organization, direction, and rate of advance of scientific knowledge and technological innovation.

CONSORTIUM FOR SCIENCE, POLICY & OUTCOMES
AT ARIZONA STATE UNIVERSITY

